A MINING MAN FROM UTAH BANK OF NEVADA.

His Observations Regarding Copper Strikes.

A Second Anaconda in the Sagebrush State.

EDITOR JOURNAL.—As the majority of your readers are doubtless interested in mining, I herewith append a brief description of the general outlook regarding copper mining in this section of the State. This State, as is well known, during the wonderful and exciting times of the discovery of silver on the Comstock, outranked all others as a silver producer for many years. This being at a time when copper mining received but little, if any, attention, the price of this metal being so low as to preclude the possibility of making it a lucrative enterprise.

Since the demonetization of the white metal Nevada has had a setback in consequence of which a large number of mining men have devoted their attention toward a search for copper, which during the past three years has been enhanced in value that ore of a comparatively low grade can be mined and smelted to great advantage. Judging from almost unmistakable indications, the prospect bids fair that Nevada will soon regain her ascendancy in mining circles and will rank about sixth on the list of producers of the red metal in the Union.

A good copper mine is now deemed more valuable than an ordinary silver or gold proposition. The former occurring, as a rule, in very large deposits and is easily and cheaply mined, and, by being treated in such tremendous quantities in modern smelting works, with the aid of all the well known and improved devices, electrical appliances, etc., the cost of producing this metal has been reduced to a minimum, as is evidenced particularly in this country in the great smelting centers of Montana, Arizona and the Colorado & Hecla mines of Michigan.

Referring to this particular district, but little work has been accomplished, owing in a large measure to the fact that the owners of claims have lacked the requisite means to prosecute development work. In consequence for the most part a few open cuts, short tunnels and shafts but a few feet deep constitute the extent of work done by the majority of these miners. But even in this crude and small way of mining, copper ore varying in richness from two to ten per cent have been disclosed. Indications of these ore present themselves on the surface in the form of croppings and in stringers or seams varying in thickness from one to two inches, which all point to the indisputable fact, that at some point below (perhaps from one hundred to five hundred feet) the shoots or stringers converge into one enormous chamber or body of high grade ore, the value increasing as depth is attained. At least this has been the history of the majority of our large copper producing mines in the United States.

There are several mines in this locality now producing and shipping a considerable quantity of copper ore. Among the number being the Ludwig, situated about seven miles from this place, and the Sprague. Another group of claims known as the Dyer has recently been bonded for a large amount, as also has been the Malachite. Among the larger and probably the best known properties in this district are the Redemption group, formerly known as the McConnell, owned and operated by the Nevada Consolidated Copper & Gold Mining & Milling Company of Boston, Mass., and the Blossom, owned by the Excelsior Mining Co., of Butte, Montana, who are now making preparations to construct a 150-ton smelting plant, the material for which is daily arriving on the ground. The Redemption has long been known, but little work in a systematic manner had been done on it until the present company assumed control, which was about one year ago. From a mere prospect, as it was at that time, the present owners, having since expended a large sum in developing it, it has passed from its infantile stage into a full grown mine.

This property is located about four miles from this town and is possessed by Ex-Senator Miles of Massachusetts, who is the president and general manager. Under his sagacious and judicious guidance, after stated by his secretary, Charles A. Clark, Samuel D. Bryden, chief civil engineer, both of Boston, and W. J. Lake of Reno as assayer and chemist, this property has assumed its present flourishing condition. This property consists of four claims, each being 600 feet by 1500 feet.

There is one tunnel known as the South, extending into the hill a distance of 550 feet and to a point 400 feet from the summit, in which has been encountered large bodies of ore, both carbonates and oxides of copper.

The middle tunnel is about 100 feet north of the south one, in which has been disclosed large veins of iron ore of a high percentage, associated with a good grade of lime and averaging twelve per cent of copper.

The North tunnel is about 500 feet to the north, being 250 feet long and 350 feet from the apex of the hill, showing a ledge or vein of copper sulphides or chalcopyrite. This vein is four feet wide and six feet high.

In addition to these three main tunnels already described, there are several smaller ones in different parts of the mine running at right angles with the main openings, from fifty to sixty feet apart, termed crosscuts, which are intended to strike any body of ore which may be situated on either side of the tunnels.

In some of the older workings near the top of the hill, where the original development work was commenced, are to be found immense caverns or chambers from which thousands of tons of ore have been taken in the past. These places now being about exhausted, are inhabited by owls, bats and rats which appear to be perfectly harmless as these creatures offered no objections to our intrusion in their sanctum.

What an ideal retreat I thought for the criminal classes in order to escape detection and capture. The scene was truly very gruesome, and when at last I emerged from this very uninviting spot, by means of a ladder seventy-five feet in length up a shaft, I felt much relieved.

Leading below from the main tunnels or fissures are inclines and shafts making different angles with the plane and varying in dimensions from four to six feet wide and from six to eight feet high and penetrating the earth from fifty to two hundred feet. From these shafts, at points about twenty-five feet apart, are drifts or cross-cuts diverging in any and all directions, that may be necessary toward finding bodies of ore. As a rule there are evidences on the side walls of these tunnels and shafts, which guide the practical miner as to which direction to pursue his course; possibly but stains of copper, which have leached through from some point hidden. Again there are upraises or slopes leading upward from the main tunnels, often times to points hundreds of feet above. For the convenience of the miners, ladders are provided for their descent and ascent.

For hoisting the ore from the depths various methods are in operation. In some instances horse power; in very deep workings it is much cheaper and quicker to use steam.

In all the varied workings in this property the ore assay from twelve to forty per cent of copper to the ton; averaging in value about sixty dollars per ton (net) after cost of mining, hauling, smelting and paying freight on the product to New York.

There is a peculiar charm in meandering through the innumerable ramifications of this mine, as is also the case with many other properties in different parts of the west, as in nearly every different dip, spur and angle something new is revealed to the close observer.

The veins or ledges in this property are true fissures, the walls being perfectly defined and are about four feet wide and of unknown depth. The general formation of the country is iron, lime with porphyry and talc; the contact being granite. It is a well known fact that ore occurring in fissures with the formation as described is, as a rule, a positive indication that the ore bodies are permanent, especially in copper mines, and extend to tremendous depths.

Regarding this property, I am thoroughly convinced the ore possesses all the features and characteristics of a very fine smelting proposition, containing in itself, by the proper mixing of the different characters of ore, sufficient iron and lime to flux or melt it without the addition of extra fluxes containing no precious metals, and a sufficient amount of sulphur ore to produce the most desirable results, a very uncommon and remarkable circumstance in the majority of localities.

Altogether it would not be surprising if in the near future a second Anaconda would be unearthed.

The company has erected a smelting works with a capacity of sixty tons of ore per day (of 24 hours) for the reduction of these ores to pig copper or bullion. The works have been very successfully operated for some time, and a large amount of bullion, assaying about 98 per cent of copper per ton, besides a small amount of gold and silver, has been produced and shipped to New York for refining, where it is worth about $280 dollars per ton, after deducting freight charges. I understand that before starting this smelting enterprise there were many "doubting Thomases" in various portions of the country, both east and west, who predicted a total failure, deeming it impossible to treat Nevada ores, considering them too refractory, etc.

The writer having observed, however, after a sojourn here for some time and witnessed the flow of hot copper from the furnace, most emphatically states that the hypotheses of the above named gentlemen have proven entirely unfounded and chimerical and that "some good can come out of Nazareth."

The writer, who has spent over twenty years in the west operating smelting works, on both copper and lead-silver and gold ores of every variety with success, can see no reason why the ores of Nevada cannot be handled, providing of course that the values warrant it.

It is a well known fact that the smelting of ores is not experimental as this process has been in vogue for the past forty years in this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast.

The smelting works embraces, among its improvements, eight commodious buildings, consisting of office, boarding house, assay office, etc., and are located about one mile from this town and within a quarter of a mile of the Walker river, the water of which is extremely pure and in which abound large quantities of trout. Along the banks of the river are numbers of ranches or farms, the owners of which settled here over twenty-five years ago.

All the claims and properties in the district are 680 miles from Ogden, Utah, and 835 miles from San Francisco and are reached via the U. P. R. R. via Reno, Nevada. The weather is very delightful this winter. The summers I understand are quite agreeable, nights always cool.

This company has in contemplation the erection of a much larger smelting plant as the prospect of a large increase of ore is so encouraging that the small sixty ton furnace will doubtless prove inadequate to smelt the output of their mines.

They have also in view the installation of an electric power line for the cheap and more rapid transmission of ores from the mine, a distance of four miles from the works.

OUR FUTURE.

The people of Nevada have been made alive again after a suspension of life for a longer period of time than came to Rip Van Winkle which was twenty years or there about as declared in drama. It is not intended to convey a thought that includes any suspension of actual life as is represented in the case of Rip Van Winkle, but it is the intention to bring forward the fact that a suspension in spirit has been forced upon the people which is always a companion to a suspension of freedom of action under adverse circumstances, that set upon the feelings and sensibilities of a community.

There was a suspension of spirit which was made known through a disappearance of energy and go-ahead-activeness which was every where to be learned through a suspension of development and improvement. When business is going forward under a pressure of active living conditions, it is made known in the movements and language of men.

When people are surrounded by favorable circumstances there is a stimulus to action that is not present when a suspension of business is forced, by unfavorable methods upon them. When favorable circumstances are present, the blood in the system that drives the man to action moves more quickly.

The heart beats more quickly and stronger when the feelings are acting under an active brain which is always true of the brain respecting its action when it has work that brings pleasant surroundings and the enjoyment and comforts of life, which can only be obtained when opportunity to work to secure them is present in abundance. It is admitted that the people of Nevada are not moving at this time as they will move within the next two years.

Should they continue under like favorable circumstances as they now possess and have been under for the last eighteen months. It takes time to oil and put in order for active work a machine that had been laid away for all practical purposes for an average live time.

There are spots where rust makes an appearance in connection with a general roughness in all of its parts from long disuse. Man is for many purposes a machine, and disuse makes him ungainly and slow in many particulars; hence the saying, "I am rusty," or any similar remark that conveys a knowledge of disuse.

Our people have become rusty in many business departments and need cleaning up and practice to fit them for the work there is before them to make the development in the State that will be required from their hands, brains and general make-up.

The writer exercises a freedom peculiar to a Nevada, when talking about Nevada or to them, as he is a Nevada, in its best or worst sense, himself, and has the right to talk to them about the conditions there are upon them, as there is not anything he can say about them that does not in full force apply to himself. He sees and feels the truth of all he writes about our past, present and future. It is a part of it in a present sense, and knows whereof he speaks.

There is not anything within the State that is active for our present and future good that makes a better showing than is being made by the legislature now in session. There is a manly spirit present in both bodies that bodes a future full of caution and business energy. There is a knowledge that is peculiar to itself in the history of legislatures in Nevada, which is having a most excellent effect upon the people of the commonwealth. The course of the legislature, so far as it has gone in its business of law-making, has inspired confidence in the people by imparting to them a living feeling of self respect that had been crushed through political oppression.

There is present at this time in the people a conviction which is made plain by their manner when conversing about the future, that freedom of action and expression of thought will be in the future restored to the people of the State, after the form and manner of its exercise in the better days of the republic, and that they will in the future, in the language of Emmett, be reborn and reborn.

THE STAG PARTY

Several Friendly Glove Contests
Edified the Audience.

The Reno Wheelmen gave a stag party last evening. Only Wheelmen and members of Professor Pendergast's boxing class were admitted. The two hundred people present witnessed four highly interesting "expositions of the manly art of self defense."

Art Radcliffe and Professor Pendergast sparred four rounds. "Rad" gave a good account of himself, but, of course, was outclassed.

"Natty" Perry and "Shanty" Groton did four rounds. Groton was expected to walk away with the honors, but his antagonist's reach and agility were things the audience had not reckoned on.

Last, but not least, was a match between Barney Frazer and "Scot" Criven. The latter was hardly shoulder high to Barney, but he used his "mills" like the fans of a windmill and would have either knocked out or got knocked out if Pendergast had not warned him that this wasn't a flesh fight for the championship of Podunk.

THE RADER LECTURE

A San Francisco Divine Discourses on John and Jonathan.

Dr. Wm. Rader lectured last evening in the Methodist church on "John and Jonathan." The trend of his remarks was a description of his tour of England, describing its manners, customs, scenery etc., comparing them with America.

He spoke of meeting Queen Victoria and eulogized the late ruler of Great Britain. The speaker then crossed the Channel and entered into a dissertation upon Europe as he saw it during a summer's flight over the sea.

The lecture was exceedingly interesting. Mr. Rader is a man with rare gift of flowing language. As a word painter he is an artist.

This was the last of the star course of lectures arranged by Professor Bray and his teachers to obtain funds wherewith to purchase supplies for the high school laboratory.

Residence Burned on the South Side.

An alarm was rung in at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon from box 57, at the corner of Hill and Court streets, for a fire on Hill street, near Liberty.

The residence of John Jargoroff was almost entirely destroyed. The loss will amount to $750, half of which was covered by insurance, although the policy is payable to the holder of a mortgage on the property.

The usual delay in getting water on the blaze will soon be obviated, as Chief Hodgkinson's hose wagon will soon be in the engine house and a pair of sleek horses to draw it.

An Invention by a Reno Man.

George D. Barton, president of the Electric Mining and Reduction Company of this city, has applied for a patent on a method of delivering a hot air blast to a smelting or melting furnace, which consists in using the hot water from the water jacket of said furnace by extending the hot water pipe from the water jacket to the inside of the blast pipe and circulating the hot water through the pipe within the blast pipe, for the purpose of heating the blast, thereby preventing the furnace "freezing" and saving from 2 to 3 per cent in fuel.

On Monday, Feb. 11.

Sol Lery will on that day only, exhibit at his store, a full line of ladies' tailor made suits, skirts and elegant spring wraps all of very latest styles and fabrics.

Ladies desiring to order either of these articles, can have their measure taken, and if desired exclusive choice can be secured and guaranteed. This is a rare opportunity and ladies should not be slow to take advantage of it.

Graduation Exercises.

The semi-annual grammar grade graduation exercises were held yesterday afternoon in the high school building. A large class received the credentials which entitle them to move a rung higher on the educational ladder.

W. F. Fuller & Co.'s pure prepared paint, guaranteed to be made of pure linseed oil; white lead and white zinc will cover more surface, will wear longer and cost less (quantity considered) than any other mixed paint. CORA McFARLEN, Teacher.

Mr. Captain, Stop the Ship.

A. Nelson had an experience the other evening which he doesn't care to repeat. O. P. Farrel gave him a spin in a cutter down Virginia street behind "Flying Peggy." A 2:20 clip over the inequalities of the street caused the sleigh to dance a jig and make extended trips up into the circumambient atmosphere. Alfred didn't like it a bit and offered Farrel a box of the best cigars in his shop if he'd let him get out and walk back.

Another Alleged Victim.

A man reported to the Sheriff's office yesterday that he got rolled for a big sum of money in the tenderloin the night previous. The matter is being investigated.
